Using Creativity & Storytelling to Build Bridges

Hello.

Here it is, my first monthly newsletter for my new website. The site, which focuses on my goal of using creativity and storytelling to build bridges, has been a long time coming, and required a lot of soul-searching and difficult decisions. (If you want to find out about the impetus behind it, please read Can a Woman Have a Multi-Track Career and Succeed?)

Each month, I will share my news (regarding my appearances, books, various activities, etc.), links to essays, articles and stories, and generally express the questions that drive all my work: "What if? Why? Why Not? How?" I don't claim to have all the answers; I simply hope that we can share a dialogue that might help us build toward a synthesis of new ideas while having some fun together.

Please treat this newsletter like a menu. Scroll down to see what's on offer, and click through to whatever catches your fancy. Then, please share with me your thoughts about any of these topics.

I will look forward to hearing from you, Sally Wiener Grotta

Technology versus Art

"...Technology versus art is an age-old debate. Back in the 1830s, when photography was invented, it was a curiosity, a marvel, but, folks asserted, it certainly wasn't an art... Then came the digital age..."

In the Beginning

"In the beginning, there was Story. Before Story, all was amorphous, unfathomable. Mysteries too profound and daunting to ever be knowable. Yet the human mind needs shape and form. We struggle to....."

Reminiscent of Margaret Atwood, Mary Doria Russell and Ursula K. Le Guin, The Winter Boy explores important political and social issues within a dynamic, character-driven otherworld, wrapped up in masterful storytelling.

On returning to her childhood village, a multi-racial Jewish woman confronts the white boy who broke her heart, is menaced by an old enemy who threatens worse, and uncovers a secret that makes her question the nature of the prejudice that formed who she is as a woman.
